Kimberlin Library

- The Library is at the heart of the student learning experience, both as a physical resource and virtual online services that are accessible anywhere via the web. Resources include:
- Our brand new Learning Zone providing a flexible and comfortable study environment (emphasis on study – not a common room which one ambassador called it) with access to syndicate rooms and presentation equipment, together with an adjacent café.
- Special facilities and services for part time and Postgraduate students, users with disabilities and distance learners
- Dedicated subject librarians for each area of study
- Enquiry desks and help at point of need from expert staff who will support you in getting the best out of our services
- 1500 study places
- Over 400 computer workstations, a free wireless network and laptop loan within the building
- 540,000 books and media items
- 3000 print journal titles

Point out Eric Wood Learning Zone and the newly developed Green House (old Gateway College)

The Green House

It offers a similar model to the Eric Wood Learning Zone, offering around 200 extra study seats, including a number of additional syndicate areas. Actual opening hours have still to be finalised, but will be focussed on providing additional study facilities at the busiest core part of the day when space in Kimberlin and elsewhere is under pressure, so something like 10-6 on weekdays. In order to ring the changes and have something a little more imaginative than “Learning Zone 3”, it will be called “The Greenhouse” - in part because of the internal and external colouring, but also because of rather more subtle allusions to cultivating and nurturing....

We have also redeveloped part of the Lower Ground Floor of the Kimberlin. This will provide additional study facilities, including four more syndicate rooms and an area for use by postgraduate research students. This will seat up to 30, with around 20 IT spaces. Opened in September and will review usage at Christmas, potentially making the space available to taught postgraduates if capacity allows.

3, Stop outside Queens Building

Queens Building – Faculty of Technology

- Home to the departments of engineering and media technology from the Faculty of Technology and the Institute of Engineering and Sustainable Development of Technology.
- One of the largest buildings in Europe with no mechanical heating and ventilation system.
- This architecturally renowned building has won several environmental awards since opening in 1993 by the Queen

Hawthorn Building-Health and Life Sciences

- Professional courses that produce graduates who are equipped with the necessary skills to work in specific roles within employment – e.g. social workers, medical scientists, pharmacists, nurses, police officers, speech and language therapists and midwives
- Many of our courses are accredited and endorsed by professional bodies such as the British Psychological Society, the General Pharmaceutical Council, the General Social Care Council, the Nursing and Midwifery Council, the Health Professions Council, the Institute of Biomedical Science and the Forensic Science Society
- High employability rate of our graduates - 94.2% of first degree graduates seeking to enter employment or further study are successful after 6 months of completing their course, earning an average salary of £23, 265
- Overall student satisfaction has increased since last year, now 84% of final year students report satisfaction with their experience and programme.
- Strong links and relationships with industry – many academics are still practitioners in their area of expertise, providing students with directly relevant teaching, making sure students are suitable for employment upon graduation
