

Doctoral Training Programme

Business and Law

Study for a PhD

Business and Law

Leicester Business School and Leicester De Montfort Law School offer a vibrant environment for doctoral research. Our research interests in the Business School span local governance, health policy, comparative housing, human resource management, organisational behaviour, small ethnic-minority business, entrepreneurship, accounting, and finance. The Leicester De Montfort Law School has strong research streams in medical law, criminal justice, administrative justice, mental health law, commercial law, international human rights, consumer law and sports law. Our world-class staff publish regularly in internationally recognised journals.

The Business and Law Doctoral Training Programme at De Montfort University (DMU) is tailored to the needs of our students. The programme delivers key research training appropriate for students engaged in cutting edge research at the boundaries of knowledge in Business and Law. It is led by a team of academics from disciplines across the Schools of Business and Law. You will learn from experts who imbue the programme with insights gained from their deep comprehension of their subjects.

Why study for a PhD at DMU?

- A doctoral training programme designed for each student's research
- Access to wide-ranging skills and training courses
- Network of fellow students within a welcoming research community
- Excellent career advice and access to the international research community
- Support to publish in leading Business and Law journals
- Thousands of lives are changed for the better every year through the inspirational teaching and vital research taking place at De Montfort University.

Based in Leicester city centre, at the heart of England, we pride ourselves in being a university of creativity and innovation.

DMU's Business and Law Doctoral Training Programme offers students bespoke lectures covering areas of topical research in these fields. Whether your area is qualitative or quantitative, the programme supplies you with the research methods and skills you will need to develop your research potential to the full.

For full details visit dmu.ac.uk/buslawDTP

To apply to study for PhD at DMU, and for further details, visit dmu.ac.uk/researchdegrees

“You will learn from experts who imbue the programme with insights gained from a deep comprehension of their subjects.”

De Montfort University

The Gateway

Leicester

LE1 9BH

United Kingdom

dmu.ac.uk/research