

Higher and Degree Apprenticeships Further Support from De Montfort University

What will De Montfort University (DMU) provide for apprentices?

Learning for each module can be via block learning, distance learning or day release. Apprentices will gain valuable input from academics and practitioners who are experts in their field. Apprentices have access to both our physical and e-learning resources. Alongside the dedicated Higher and Degree Apprenticeship Team, apprentices will have access to DMU's pastoral staff and support services.

What are workplace mentors?

As part of the apprenticeship programme, each apprentice is assigned a workplace mentor within their organisation. The workplace mentor is there to help the apprentice to learn, continue and complete their assignments. Mentors are there to help with any work based questions and share best practice and experience. For more information, see the DMU guide on Workplace Mentors.

How will DMU continue to support employers?

DMU can support employers in assessing the future needs of their workforce and work with them to identify appropriate solutions, including apprenticeships. DMU can also support employers by promoting apprenticeships at recruitment and careers fairs and to internal staff by delivering short talks and presentations.
