

The Institute of Health, Health Policy and Social Care Research are delighted to invite you to this forthcoming presentation in our 2021/2022 Seminar series on 30th March 2022 12:00-1:30pm

MADE FROM MORE

Approaches to Co-production in Care Homes: A Scoping Review Protocol

Author Bio and Affiliation: Fran Hallam, PhD student at the University of Nottingham and Research Physiotherapist at Nottingham University Hospitals NHS Trust. @FranHallam\_PT
This work is funded by an NIHR Advanced Fellowship.

Abstract: Co-production is increasingly used to find solutions to problems faced in health and social care settings. Such approaches may be beneficial in care home settings to develop improved ways of delivering care for older adults that can be implemented within these complex and diverse organisations. However, there is a lack of guidance about how to apply co-production approaches in this context. To address this, a scoping review is underway to map how co-production has been used in previous care home research studies. This knowledge will inform future research and a PhD project. The presentation will provide an overview of the scoping review protocol and preliminary results will be presented.

Joining Instructions: This event will be held via a MS Team Live Event. Please ensure you have access to Microsoft Teams prior to joining .

Click here to join the Seminar

Institute Webpage

Email: ihhpscr@dmu.ac.uk

Socials: @ihhpscr

